

NCCRA Fall 2018 Seminar

DIGITAL SECURITY 101

and

LEGISLATIVE UPDATE

Wednesday, November 14, 2018

6:00–9:00 p.m.; .30 CEUs (dinner served at 5:30 p.m.)

The Old Spaghetti Factory – Downtown

1910 J Street, Sacramento, CA 95814

Joe Palomo, Digital Security Presenter

Joe Palomo, currently an Enterprise Architect in the Information Technology department, has worked with the Sacramento Superior Court since 2002, and he has worked in the Information Technology industry for over 20 years. Joe earned an Associate's Degree in Science, Mathematics, and Engineering from Sacramento City College, a Bachelor of Science Degree in Information Technology from the University of Phoenix, and he has also earned a number of industry certifications.

Joe will present a crash course in digital security, an often overlooked subject for court reporters who deal with maintaining confidentiality on a frequent basis. This seminar will answer some questions, such as why digital security is so important for court reporters in particular, why it is important to create and use a variety of different passwords for different accounts, and what easy-to-use applications exist to facilitate a good level of digital security. This seminar is also designed to demystify and put in layman's terms some words we hear all the time but don't fully understand in the context of digital security, such as encryption and two-factor authentication.

At the end of the seminar, attendees should leave with a good grasp of basic digital security principles and will be more equipped to protect their information online in both the professional and personal spheres.

Brooke Ryan, Legislative Update Presenter

CCRA Past President Brooke Ryan, CSR, RPR, has held the position of director with the California Court Reporters Association for many years, followed by secretary-treasurer, vice president, then president-elect, and then President. She currently volunteers as the Chair within her bargaining unit for United Public Employees and has been on the board for ten-and-a-half years. She has served as president for the Sacramento Official Court Reporters Association for a total of four years. She, along with Jeremiah Van Etten, a Public Defender for Sacramento County, are raising their two sons, Oliver and Truman. Promoting the court reporting profession through legislative advocacy and supporting court reporting students are her passions

Brooke will present the status of bills and legislation regarding the court reporting profession that has passed and are now law as well as those that have stalled. She will update our members on the bills that the California Court Reporters Association and unions plan to carry in the upcoming legislative session.
